Cleveland Metropolitan Bar Association Launches
"The Future State of Justice."
Leading The Local Conversation

CLEVELAND - November 1st, 2019 - The Cleveland Metropolitan Bar Association (CMBA) is proud to announce a new source for news and discussion around the future of justice in Cuyahoga County. “The Future State of Justice” has a new home located at clemetrobar.org/justice.

CMBA has always been a leader in all matters of law and justice in our community. As Cuyahoga County plans to build a new justice center, CMBA will gather news and opinion from diverse sources in this critical conversation. We will also share our own ideas for change and reform. The site is also the best place to find schedules and agendas for all of the upcoming public meetings.

“The Future State of Justice” is a continuation of a theme we launched with the October issue of our Bar Journal, when we dedicated the content to this critical challenge. CMBA CEO Rebecca Ruppert McMahon said, “We believe the process must be inclusive, and we are committed to continued leadership in making sure that every voice is heard in regard to justice in Cuyahoga County.”

CMBA President Ian Friedman wrote in a recent letter published by Cleveland.com, “Why should citizens care? Because people’s lives are literally at stake. So, too, are people’s livelihoods and the financial well-being of our community. This is going to cost every single Cuyahoga County taxpayer. This process must be absolutely transparent.”

About the CMBA

The nonprofit Cleveland Metropolitan Bar Association operates as a center for legal professionalism in the region, promoting the highest ethical and professional standards. Serving the largest legal community in the state, the CMBA has more than 4,000 members. Learn more at clemetrobar.org.